

More than research:

Open session of the Forum for Research-Transformation

More than ten years after the first edition of the Young Researchers Forum –in 2004–, a joint reflection session is now proposed, open to professors and young researchers with interest in this participative space, aimed at fostering interdisciplinary and transnational research. Within the framework of this event, the monograph En tránsito: voces, acciones y reacciones will be presented. It is a result of the work done by the participants in the Forum's 2013-2015 edition.

Drawing on the research-transformation model, the Forum wants to focus on processes of change and movement, as well as on their transnational and translocal impacts. It is about sharing knowledge and contextualising social changes, in a way that theories and practices join together at different levels –global, national, regional and local–, from different spaces and/or disciplines.

This event aims to be an opportunity to explore new forms and lines for the continuation of the work done so far. Therefore, professors, PhD students and young researchers are invited to attend and spread this call.
